

DANCE PROGRAM

The UW Dance Program prepares the next generation of performers, educators, arts advocates, and cultural leaders. At its core lies the recognition of art as the confluence of theory, practice, and creativity. With a commitment to respecting the individual, the Dance Program fosters inquiry and engages the community in open-minded exchange.

Education

Students entering the award winning UW Dance Program discover a learning community where artists/scholars thrive in an environment that promotes access, inclusion and excellence. We offer a diverse and stimulating educational experience, rooted in the liberal arts, and dedicated to connecting theoretical inquiry to experiential learning. Students considering careers in performance and choreography, dance education, dance related fields such as arts administration and physical therapy, or those interested in pursuing graduate studies in dance may choose from a variety of options culminating in a Bachelor of Arts degree with a major in dance.

The undergraduate curriculum provides rigor and a breadth of experience, including courses in: ballet, contemporary, jazz/musical theatre techniques, tap, world dance and culture, social dance forms, somatic practices, anatomy, teaching methods, dance history, aesthetics, research methods, ethnography, music for dance, creative process, improvisation, partnering, composition, repertory and production. Many of our students double major. Our recent BA revision enables students to use a broad range of electives in order to help support particular interests and career goals.

Undergraduate alumni are employed at some of Seattle's most influential local arts organizations such as Pacific Northwest Ballet, On the Boards, and Velocity Dance Center. Graduates also work as private studio and public school instructors, choreographers, and performers with nationally recognized companies, as well as physical and occupational therapists and somatic practitioners.

The Dance Program offers one of the most respected and innovative Master of Fine Arts degree programs in the country, developed to serve professional dancers seeking to transition into higher education positions. MFA candidates receive full financial support during the two-year course of study. In exchange, they teach an array of studio and theory courses to majors, minors, and general education students at the UW, including Dance 100, a course that has set the bar for transformative online instruction. We boast an outstanding job placement record, with alumni in tenure track teaching and upper administration positions at colleges and universities across the nation. Graduate alumni have also garnered prestigious awards as choreographers, performers, company directors, and filmmakers, including the Bessie Award, Fred Astaire Award, the Guggenheim Fellowship, and NEA and National Dance Project grants.
